Dr. Florian Kongoli, architect of the very successful SIPS event series, a showcase for many Nobel Laureates who have made outstanding scientific contributions for humanity, was made an Honorary Citizen of Rio de Janeiro (a Carioca) following SIPS 2018.

The Sustainable Industrial Processing Summit and Exhibition (SIPS) is a yearly event that is deeply science-focused and industrial engineering-oriented. It has been organised since 2003 by the not-for-profit corporation FLOGEN

Stars Outreach. Dr. Florian Kongoli, President of the SIPS Organising Committee and Chairman of FLOGEN Stars Outreach, is currently busy organising SIPS 2020 for the end of November (see Page 19). He firmly believes that governments have a fundamental role in the sustainable development of countries and populations. He regards engineers as 'the locomotives of society', but is also a big fan of principled academic research.
