- He is among a small number of renowned scientists honored with this medal

The Municipal Council of Nancy, France, unanimously awarded the Gold Medal, its highest honor, to Dr. Florian Kongoli, for significant contribution in science and technology in the framework of sustainable development.
Dr. Florian Kongoli, is among a few well-known scientists honored with this medal. Previous recipients are Professors Dan Shechtman, Nobel Laureate (chemistry); Knut Urban, Wolf Prize (physics) and Jean-Marie Dubois, founder of Jean Lamour Institute; President, Lorraine Academy of Science; member, European Academy of Sciences and Slovenian Academy of Engineering and corresponding associate, Stanislas Academia.

Prof. Jean-Marie Dubois, President of the Lorraine Academy of Sciences gives the opening speech during the ceremony in honor of Dr Florian Kongoli. At his side are Professors Olivier Cachard, lawyer, and Jean-Dominique de Korwin, doctor, both academicians of the Lorraine Academy of Sciences; Mathieu Klein, the mayor of Nancy and president of the Metropolis of Grand Nancy and Dr Florian Kongoli

"Dr Kongoli is one of the world's best materials specialists that find sustainable solutions, working worldwide, with the largest companies," says Mathieu Klein, the City Mayor.
"Congratulations to Dr. Kongoli for his long scientific contribution to sustainable development," says Chaynesse Khirouni, President, Elected Assembly of Meurthe-et-Moselle.
"It is a great pleasure to see Dr. Kongoli honored by the City of Nancy," says Jean-Marie Dubois, President, Lorraine Academy of Sciences

The Gold Medal was given by Mathieu Klein, the City Mayor and President of Grand Nancy Metropolis on October 13, 2021, in an official ceremony and reception dedicated to Dr Kongoli, held in the magnificent City Hall overlooking Stanislas Square, voted, just a few days before, the best monumental square in France.
